My aunt is a scientist. She has a degree in chemistry from UNAM, a very famous university in Mexico City.

She works in a laboratory that makes medicines and health products. She is in charge of a team that is trying to develop a new medicine to help prevent influenza.

She's a hard worker—she works more than fifty hours a week! She loves her job, and she wouldn't want to do anything else. She says it's good to know you can help other people in the world and one day, possibly, she might find cures to deadly diseases, such as cancer.
